Question 1

Correct

Mark 1.00 out of 1.00

Question ID #11996: At the beginning of therapy with Mark M., you discussed the possible duration of treatment and estimated that therapy would not extend beyond his insurance coverage of your fee. You also informed Mark that you would be unable to reduce your fee when his therapy was no longer covered by insurance. Unfortunately, that time has arrived as Mark's insurance will cover only the next three sessions, many of Mark's problems are still unresolved, and he cannot afford your full fee. In terms of ethical responsibilities, you are

_____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. required to see Mark at a reduced or deferred fee until his problems are adequately resolved
- ☐ B. required to see Mark at a reduced or deferred fee until he feels ready to terminate treatment
- ☒ C. required to discuss the matter with Mark and make a referral at the end of the three sessions if necessary ✓ Correct
- ☐ D. not required to continue seeing Mark since you discussed this matter at the beginning of therapy

The correct answer is C.

You are not required to continue seeing a client if the client cannot pay your fee. However, to avoid abandoning the client when insurance coverage has ended, you should either offer services at a reduced or deferred fee or, if that is not feasible, make appropriate referrals. Standard 6.04 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.32 of the Canadian Code of Ethics apply to this situation.

Answer A: This is incorrect as ethical guidelines do not require you to see a patient at a reduced or deferred rate.

Answer B: This is incorrect as psychologists are not required to provide services at reduced or deferred rates.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect because even though discussion of this issue at the beginning of therapy is a good practice, it does not eliminate your responsibility to the client when his insurance ends.

Question 2

Incorrect

Mark 0.00 out of 1.00

Question ID #11998: After a year in private practice, you hire a newly-licensed psychologist whom you will provide with an office and secretarial services. You will also refer clients to the psychologist and pay him 50% of the fees he collects from those clients. This arrangement is _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. unethical because it involves barter
- ☒ B. unethical because it involves being paid for client referrals ✗ Incorrect
- ☐ C. ethical as long as the psychologist is being compensated in an equitable way
- ☐ D. ethical because, as an employer, you can determine the conditions of employment

The correct answer is C.

Of the responses given, this one is the best. The arrangement described in this question seems somewhat dubious in terms of acceptability, but the facts presented do not clearly indicate an ethical violation. One can quickly misread this question and think that the fee split is based on the referral (which would be problematic between colleagues). But for two reasons, this scenario is actually ethical. 1) the fee split is not between colleagues; it is between an employee and an employer and 2) the fee split is based on services rendered not the referral. The employed psychologist is receiving 50% of the fee for providing therapy services and the employer psychologist is receiving 50% of the fee for providing rent, office supplies, scheduling, marketing, and clientele. This issue is addressed in Standard 6.07 of the Ethics Code and is discussed in the Ethics Manual of the written study materials.

Answer A: This is incorrect as ethical guidelines only address barter with clients, and barter is acceptable under some circumstances.

Answer B: This is incorrect as referral fees are not entirely prohibited by ethical guidelines.

Answer D: This is incorrect because it is not an accurate description of an employer's ethical responsibilities.

Question 3

Correct

Mark 1.00 out of 1.00

Question ID #11999: Informed consent from a client _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. must always be in writing
- ☐ B. must always be in writing and in the client's native language
- ☐ C. may be either verbal or in writing
- ☒ D. may be either verbal or in writing but must be documented ✓ Correct

The correct answer is D.

Standard 3.10 of the APA's Ethics Code states that consent must be "appropriately documented," and Principle I.22 of the Canadian Code of Ethics states that it is permissible to "accept and document oral consents" when there is a good reason not to obtain signed written consent.

Answer A: This is incorrect, as informed consent must be documented, but ethical guidelines do not require consent to be written.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect because clinicians are responsible for documenting consent, but it may be verbal if documented.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect because it is a less complete answer than Answer D, which specifies consent must be documented.

Question 4

Correct

Mark 1.00 out of 1.00

Question ID #12000: Dr. Oliver Olivetti has been seeing a client for several months who recently changed jobs. The client learns her new insurance plan does not begin covering pre-existing conditions for 12 months. The client asks Dr. Olivetti to produce invoices so that it appears she has just started therapy. If Dr. Olivetti complies with the client's request, he is acting _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. ethically since he is taking the client's welfare into consideration
- ☐ B. ethically only if not to do so would require the client to quit therapy
- ☐ C. ethically only if the insurance forms do not require him to sign a statement saying that treatment began after the effective date of the insurance
- ☒ D. unethically ✓ Correct

The correct answer is D.

The client in this situation is asking Dr. Olivetti to commit insurance fraud and, if Dr. Olivetti does so, he will be acting both unethically and illegally. Standard 6.04 of the APA's Ethics Code addresses this matter.

Answer A: This is incorrect because although Dr. Olivetti should consider his client's welfare, he would be acting unethically and illegally if he agrees to the arrangement requested by the client.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect, as this arrangement would be illegal and unethical regardless of the ramifications for the client.

Answer C: This is incorrect because this would still represent insurance fraud since the client and therapist are well aware of the insurance provisions.

Question 5

Correct

Mark 1.00 out of 1.00

Question ID #12004: Which of the following best describes the status of professional (therapy) records?

Select one:

- ☐ A. The physical record belongs to the client.
- ☐ B. The physical record belongs to the therapist.
- ☒ C. The physical record belongs to the therapist, but the information contained therein belongs to the client. ✓ Correct
- ☐ D. The physical record and the information contained therein belong jointly to the therapist and the client.

The correct answer is C.

While the actual physical record is the property of the therapist, laws require therapists to make the information contained in records available to the client in most situations. This does not mean that a therapist must release the physical record to a client but, instead, that the therapist may be required to show the client the record or provide the client with a summary or copy of it. The laws regarding professional records are complex and vary somewhat from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. When answering questions like this one, you'll want to pick a general answer that is likely to apply to most jurisdictions.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect as the client does not own the physical record.

Answer B: This is incorrect because it is a less complete answer than C. While the physical record does belong to the therapist, this answer fails to address the complexity of the question, which is that the client has access to the contents of the therapy notes.

Answer D: This is incorrect because while the client has a right to the contents of the therapy records, the record itself belongs to the therapist.

Question ID #12005: Dr. Bettina Browne, a licensed psychologist, undertakes a child custody evaluation at the request of the child's mother. The father agrees to be evaluated also, and Dr. Browne obtains signed informed consent from both parents before beginning her assessment. Dr. Browne administers the MMPI and Rorschach tests to both parents. The mother obtains significantly elevated scores on the MMPI's K and L scales, suggesting that she tends to lie and to be excessively defensive, and these tendencies are confirmed by her Rorschach responses. No significant abnormality is suggested by the father's MMPI and Rorschach results. Based on the test results, Dr. Browne recommends that the mother not be awarded custody of the child. Dr. Browne _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. has acted ethically because her evaluation included both parents
- ☐ B. has acted ethically because the parents signed informed consents before the evaluation
- ☐ C. has acted unethically because of her use of the MMPI and Rorschach tests as methods of evaluating the mothers parental suitability
- ☐ D. has acted unethically because she made specific recommendations regarding custody rather than simply reporting the results of the evaluation

The correct answer is C.

A psychologist is ethically required to use tests only for purposes for which they have been validated according to Standard 9.02 of the APA's Ethics Code. Based on the information given, it appears that Dr. Browne has acted unethically by basing her custody recommendation on MMPI and Rorschach test results since these tests have not been validated for this purpose. Even if the tests had been validated for this purpose, Dr. Browne's recommendation should have been based on more than the results of only two tests.

Answer A: This is incorrect because even though the psychologist acted appropriately by evaluating both parents prior to making a recommendation, response C. is a better answer.

Answer B: This is incorrect because obtaining signed informed consent does not overcome the problem of using the MMPI and Rorschach as predictors of parental functioning, a purpose for which they have not been validated.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect because recommendations are acceptable as long as they are based on a thorough evaluation of all parties.

Question ID #12006: Miranda M., age 32, makes an appointment with you at the recommendation of her physician who has diagnosed her with recurrent headaches due to stress. The woman tells you that a friend of hers was trained in self-hypnosis for tension headaches and says that she also would like to learn self-hypnosis. You took a weekend workshop on hypnosis in graduate school but have not used it in your clinical practice. As an ethical psychologist, you should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. admit your lack of expertise in the use of self-hypnosis and refer the woman to another therapist
- ☐ B. advise the woman that the underlying cause of her headaches would probably not be dealt with by self-hypnosis and suggest that she begin individual psychotherapy
- ☐ C. accept the woman for treatment and begin training her in self-hypnosis after reviewing your workshop notes
- ☐ D. accept the woman for treatment and begin training her in self-hypnosis but obtain consultation if you encounter any problems during the course of treatment

The correct answer is A.

Of the responses given, this one is most consistent with the requirement to provide services that are within the boundaries of your professional competence. Note that, while it is up to you to determine your competence with regard to a particular service or technique, a weekend workshop in self-hypnosis is clearly inadequate. Providing services within the boundaries of one's competence is addressed by Standard 2.01 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.6 of the Canadian Code of Ethics.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect, as it would be unethical to try to convince the client to choose another course of treatment simply because you are not trained in the treatment she desires.

Answer C: This is incorrect because reviewing your workshop notes would not be adequate training.

Answer D: This is incorrect because although this response comes closer to fulfilling the requirements of the ethical guidelines than do responses B. and C., it falls short of those requirements because it implies that consultation would not be sought unless you believe that you are having problems during the course of treatment.

Question 8

Question ID #12008: You have been hired to assist with a research project on process variables in group psychotherapy. The psychologist who is the principal investigator tells you to discourage participants from leaving the group prior to the end of the study because, if too many participants drop out, the study's potential usefulness will be seriously compromised. As an ethical psychologist, you should

Select one:

- ☐ A. refuse to assist with the research project
- ☐ B. immediately file a complaint against the psychologist with the psychology licensing board or ethics committee
- ☐ C. write a letter to the psychologist, indicating the relevant ethical standards and offering to discuss the matter with him
- ☐ D. follow the psychologist's instructions since, by "discouraging" participants from leaving the group, you are not actually coercing them to participate

The correct answer is C.

By offering to discuss the matter with the psychologist, you are attempting to resolve the matter informally, which is consistent with the requirements of the ethical guidelines. Standard 8.02 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle I.30 of the Canadian Code of Ethics both require psychologists to allow participants to withdraw from a research study at any time.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect because resigning from the project would not correct the ethical violation.

Answer B: This is incorrect because although a report may eventually be necessary, it is not the best first step since this matter may be amenable to an informal resolution.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect because this would be unethical, and you would be violating the provisions of Standards 1.04 and 1.05 of the Ethics Code and Principles II.40 and II.41 of the Canadian Code of Ethics, which require psychologists to take action when a colleague acts in an unethical way.

Question 9

Question ID #12010: A psychologist supervisor of several interns at a community hospital in a small town notices that one of the interns seems unenthusiastic and depressed. When he talks to her, she tells him that she's been very unhappy lately and feels she has no one to turn to. The intern asks the psychologist to see her in therapy, and he agrees to do so. The psychologist has acted _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. unethically by agreeing to get involved in a dual relationship
- ☐ B. unethically by violating the intern's right to privacy
- ☐ C. ethically because they are working in a community hospital in a small town
- ☐ D. ethically because the intern is in desperate need of help

The correct answer is A.

In most situations, psychologists should avoid multiple (dual) relationships. Standard 3.05(a) of the APA Ethics Code states that "a psychologist refrains from entering into multiple relationships if the multiple relationships could reasonably be expected to impair the psychologist's objectivity, competence, or effectiveness in performing his or her functions as a psychologist, or otherwise risks exploitation or harm to the person with whom the professional relationship exists." The psychologist in the situation described is entering into multiple relationships that may threaten his objectivity and effectiveness as a supervisor and therapist.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect as there is no indication that privacy is an issue in this situation.

Answer C: This is incorrect, because, in some circumstances, multiple relationships may be unavoidable. However, the fact that the intern and psychologist work in a community hospital in a small town does not necessarily mean that no other options are available.

Answer D: This is incorrect, as there is no indication that the intern is in such "desperate need of help" that she cannot wait to see another professional.

Question ID #12012: A psychologist decides to use a computerized test service to facilitate scoring and interpretation of the MMPI-2, which he frequently administers to his clients. The psychologist should be aware that _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. the use of computerized interpretations is prohibited by ethical guidelines
- ☐ B. computerized scoring and interpretation services are notoriously unreliable
- ☐ C. computerized interpretations should always be supplemented with other information obtained by the psychologist
- ☐ D. because of their objectivity, computerized interpretations are preferable to subjective interpretations

The correct answer is C.

Automated scoring and interpretation services are available for a number of psychological tests including the MMPI-2. The information in a computerized interpretation is limited and, therefore, the best policy is to always supplement computerized interpretations with information from other tests, interviews, and observations, according to Standards 9.02 and 9.09 of the APA's Ethics Code.

Answer A: This is incorrect because the use of automated interpretation services is not prohibited by ethical guidelines as long as certain standards are met by both the service and the users of the service.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect, because the quality of computer interpretations varies from service to service, and it cannot be concluded that all computerized interpretations are "notoriously unreliable."

Answer D: This is incorrect, as the information provided by computerized interpretations is limited, and the accuracy of the interpretation depends on the quality of the service. Therefore, it cannot be concluded that computerized interpretations are necessarily the preferred method of score interpretation.

Question ID #12014: The term "insanity" is a _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. popular term for a mental disorder
- ☐ B. legal, nonpsychiatric term for certain types of mental disorders
- ☐ C. psychiatric term that refers to a psychotic disorder with an unknown etiology
- ☐ D. psychiatric term that refers to an organic mental disorder

The correct answer is B.

The term "insanity" is used in the legal arena and is not a psychiatric term. Defendants who plead not guilty by reason of insanity are contending that a mental disease or defect precluded them from understanding the difference between right and wrong. Insanity is a legal term that varies in terms of its definition from jurisdiction to jurisdiction.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect, as "insanity" has a distinct legal meaning.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect, as the term "insanity" has a legal, not psychiatric, meaning.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect, because "insanity" is not a term used to describe a mental disorder.

Question ID #12016: Alice A. has a master's degree in clinical psychology but is not licensed. She is hired by a community mental health clinic to administer several standard psychological tests to adults. According to ethical guidelines, this is _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. acceptable as long as a professional clinical psychologist co-signs Alice's evaluations
- ☐ B. acceptable as long as a professional clinical psychologist supervises Alice's activities
- ☐ C. unacceptable since Alice is not a licensed psychologist
- ☐ D. unacceptable since Alice does not have a doctoral degree

The correct answer is B.

Ethical (and legal) guidelines do not prohibit the provision of all psychological services by individuals who are not licensed, clinical psychologists. However, they do require that such persons be supervised by a licensed psychologist.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Simply co-signing reports would not be considered adequate supervision.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect, because Alice may administer some psychological tests as long as she has been adequately trained and is supervised by a licensed psychologist according to Standard 9.07 of the APA's Ethics Code.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect because having a doctoral degree is not required for the provision of psychological services, but supervision by a licensed psychologist is required in this case.

Question ID #12018: Following the retirement of his business partner, Dr. Sheldon Smith is the only psychologist in a small town with the closest mental health professional over 100 miles away. Several of Dr. Smith's new clients have problems for which he has limited training and experience. Dr. Smith should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. refuse to see the clients
- ☐ B. see these clients but use only interventions that he has experience using
- ☐ C. see the clients and obtain supervision or consultation by telephone
- ☐ D. agree to see these clients only if they are in crisis

The correct answer is C.

Rather than turning patients away, Dr. Smith should seek supervision to meet his clients' needs. Standard 2.01 of the APA Ethics Code states that "When psychologists are asked to provide services to individuals for whom appropriate mental health services are not available and for which psychologists have not obtained the competence necessary, psychologists ... may provide such services in order to ensure that services are not denied if they make a reasonable effort to obtain the competence required by using relevant research, training, consultation, or study."

Answer A: This answer is incorrect, given the ethics code encourages psychologists to seek the training and supervision needed to meet clients' needs when there are limited referral options available.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect, given the clients' needs, including the client's diagnosis and cultural background should determine the mode of treatment delivered.

Answer D is incorrect. While delivering treatment in an emergency may be appropriate, this answer is less complete than Answer C.

Question 14

Question ID #12019: A 24-year-old woman calls Dr. Sylvia Silby for an appointment but refuses to discuss her problem on the phone. During the initial therapy session, the young woman discusses her difficulties in a vague, guarded manner, indicating that, for the past few months, she has had increasing difficulty sleeping and has felt anxious and irritable. Ten minutes before the end of the session, the young woman tells Dr. Silby that she has been seeing another therapist for six months and that four weeks ago they began having a sexual relationship. As an ethical psychologist, Dr. Silby should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. advise the woman to terminate treatment with the other psychologist and begin therapy with her
- ☐ B. advise her of her rights and alternative courses of action
- ☐ C. contact the other therapist to discuss the matter with them
- ☐ D. file a complaint against the other therapist with the ethics committee and recommend to the woman that she immediately terminate treatment with the other therapist

The correct answer is B.

Of the actions listed in the answers, the best one is to discuss the matter with the client and advise her of her options. Ethical violations by colleagues are covered in Standards 1.04 and 1.05 of the APA's Ethics Code and are discussed in the Ethics Manual of the written study materials. Clearly, the original therapist has violated ethical guidelines and may have violated the law.

Answer A: In order to respect the client's autonomy, Dr. Silby should discuss with the client her options so the client can determine the next steps.

Answer C: Dr. Silby cannot contact the therapist without the client's consent, since to do so would represent a breach of confidentiality.

Answer D: Dr. Silby cannot make a report herself without the client's consent, as again, this action would be a breach of confidentiality.

Question ID #12020: Farris F. terminated therapy with Dr. Pamela Prince several months ago but calls to request an appointment due to feeling lonely and depressed. Farris also feels "like he wants to die." In the past two months, Dr. Prince has been reducing her caseload due to retirement. The best course of action in this situation is for Dr. Prince to _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. explain to Farris that she is reducing her caseload but that she is willing to counsel him by phone in case of an emergency
- ☐ B. see Farris in therapy until the crisis has passed and then provide him with appropriate referrals
- ☐ C. explain to Farris that she is no longer accepting clients and refer him to a colleague
- ☐ D. provide Farris with several referrals and ask him to call her if none of those turn out to be satisfactory

The correct answer is B.

Because the client states he "feels like he wants to die," the best course of action is to see the client in therapy until the crisis has passed, and then provide him with appropriate referrals. This answer is most consistent with the "spirit" of the ethical guidelines. See, for example, Standards 3.04 and 10.09 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principles II.2 and II.34 of the Canadian Code of Ethics.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. This response fails to prioritize the client's welfare in accordance with ethical mandates.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect as, again, it does not respond to the fact the client is experiencing a crisis.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. It, too, fails to account for the serious nature of the client's concerns.

Question ID #12021: Dr. Wanda Weim, a licensed psychologist, receives a request to testify in a custody proceeding on behalf of a male client that was receiving conjoint marital therapy six months prior. He requests Dr. Weim to provide the court with information about his parenting skills and relationship with his spouse and children. Dr. Weim contacts the man's wife, who refuses to give the psychologist permission to testify. Dr. Weim should do which of the following?

Select one:

- ☐ A. testify as requested by the husband
- ☐ B. testify only about matters pertaining to the husband
- ☐ C. testify only about matters for which she is qualified to make a judgment
- ☐ D. refuse to testify

The correct answer is D.

Multi-client situations create special considerations and concerns about confidentiality since it is not often possible to release information about one client without also revealing confidential information about another client. In this situation, both clients (the husband and wife) must give their permission before Dr. Weim can release confidential information. Therefore, she should refuse to testify, unless she is ordered to do so by the court.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Dr. Weim does not have permission to release information from one of the clients.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Because therapy was conjoint, Dr. Weim will be unable to release information pertaining to one client without releasing information about the other client.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. In this case, the primary concern is whether both clients grant permission for Dr. Weim to testify.

Question ID #12022: You have started seeing a client who is from a different cultural background than you. She is having difficulty coping with the recent death of her mother. You have frequently worked with clients who are coping with loss, but you have never worked with a client from this background. You'd like to continue seeing this client in therapy to broaden your experience with culturally diverse populations. Your best course of action would be to _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. continue working with the client but proceed with caution
- ☐ B. seek supervision or consultation and continue to work with the client
- ☐ C. refer the client to another therapist who has experience working with clients from this background
- ☐ D. explain the situation to the client and terminate therapy

The correct answer is B.

This is addressed by Standard 2.01(b) of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.8 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Standard 2.01(b) states "where scientific or professional knowledge in the discipline of psychology establishes that an understanding of factors associated with age, gender, gender identity, race, ethnicity, culture, national origin, religion, sexual orientation, disability, language or socioeconomic status is essential for effective implementation of their services or research, psychologists have or obtain the training, experience, consultation, or supervision necessary to ensure the competence of their services, or they make appropriate referrals."

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. To proceed with caution is insufficiently vague, but seeking consultation or supervision is consistent with the ethical guidelines.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Given the therapist has previously worked with clients who have experienced loss, there is no indication that a referral is necessary, particularly when the therapist can obtain consultation or supervision.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. It is both acceptable and desirable for psychologists to acquire new skills and to treat new problems, provided they obtain appropriate supervision or consultation.

Question ID #12023: After three sessions with a therapy client, Dr. Leonard Lykowski realizes that he's feeling somewhat hostile toward the client, because she reminds him of his wife whom he's currently divorcing. Dr. Lykowski's best course of action would be to _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. refer the client to another therapist without telling the client the reason for the referral
- ☐ B. refer the client to another therapist after discussing the reason with her
- ☐ C. recognize that his feelings are the result of countertransference and continue to work with the client
- ☐ D. consult with another psychologist to determine whether or not to continue seeing the client in therapy

The correct answer is D.

This issue is addressed in Standard 2.06 of the APA's Ethics Code and is discussed in the Ethics Manual of the written study materials. In this situation, Dr. Lykowski's personal problems may be affecting his objectivity. Consultation with another professional is ordinarily the best course of action whenever a therapist is concerned that a personal problem might interfere with one's ability to provide adequate therapy. While you wouldn't simply terminate treatment due to countertransference, if you are unable to work through it and provide objective treatment, termination may be applicable.

Answer A: Referring the client without an explanation is generally not consistent with sound practice and concern for the client's welfare.

Answer B: While Dr. Lykowski may decide to take this route as a last resort, he would serve the client better by consulting with another professional to attempt to resolve the conflict.

Answer C: Dr. Lykowski's feelings likely do, in fact, represent countertransference, but he would want to seek consultation to determine if those feelings are negatively impacting his ability to provide the client with appropriate services.

Question ID #12025: Dr. Jacob Mansfield receives a subpoena requiring him to testify about a current therapy client. Dr. Mansfield contacts the client who states that she does not want him to release any confidential information to the court. Dr. Mansfield should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. notify the attorney who issued the subpoena that the client has asserted the privilege and request that he be released from subpoena
- ☐ B. do nothing further until he receives an order from the court to appear at the trial
- ☐ C. notify the court that he will not be appearing at the trial because the client does not want him to do so
- ☐ D. advise the attorney who issued the subpoena that he cannot appear as requested because the client has not given him permission to do so

The correct answer is A.

A subpoena is a legal document that requires a psychologist to appear at a designated time in a legal proceeding. If the client invokes the privilege by saying she does not want the therapist to release confidential information to the court, the subpoena is still valid, and the psychologist must appear unless he/she has been released from it. When the client invokes the privilege in this type of situation, the psychologist should contact the client's attorney or his/her own attorney to discuss the matter. The psychologist can also contact the attorney who issued the subpoena to request to be released from it.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Psychologists should not ignore subpoenas. Unless the psychologist receives a written release, he/she must appear as requested but would not reveal confidential (privileged) information without the client's consent or without an order from the court to do so.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. The psychologist should work through an attorney to obtain a release from the subpoena.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. Without a release from the subpoena, the psychologist must appear in court.

Question ID #12028: You receive an email from Dr. Brenda Browne, a licensed psychologist, who is currently seeing one of your former clients for a substance use disorder. Dr. Browne asks you to forward the client's record to her and states that the client has signed a release authorizing you to do so. You should:

Select one:

- ☐ A. wait until you receive a request from the client before taking any action
- ☐ B. contact the client to discuss the release of information
- ☐ C. forward a photocopy of the file to the psychologist as requested
- ☐ D. forward a summary of the file to the psychologist that includes only information related to the client's current condition

The correct answer is B.

Even though the person requesting the client's record is a licensed psychologist, you would not want to breach confidentiality by providing confidential client information to her without knowing specifically to what the client has consented to.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. It is unlikely the client would contact the psychologist directly to ask that records be forwarded.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. You would want to verify that the client has, in fact, signed a release and discuss the release and its potential consequences with the client before providing the psychologist with the requested information.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. The primary concern, in this case, is to confirm the client understands the consequences of releasing information. Further, it may be difficult to separate out which information is specific to the client's current presenting concerns.

Question ID #12029: The term privilege refers to _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. an ethical requirement designed to protect client information from being disclosed except when the client has signed a release
- ☐ B. a legal requirement designed to protect confidential information from being disclosed to anyone not directly involved in a client's case
- ☐ C. an ethical requirement that applies to the confidentiality of therapist-client communications in both legal and nonlegal situations
- ☐ D. a legal requirement designed to protect confidential information from being disclosed in a legal proceeding

The correct answer is D.

Privilege is a legal term and refers to "privileged communications" that arise in legally designated relationships (e.g., the therapist-client relationship).

Answer A: This answer is incorrect, as it does not address the legal context of the term.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect, as to whether one is involved in a client's case is largely irrelevant in a legal setting.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect because privilege applies to a legal obligation. Privilege is discussed in the Ethics Manual of the written study materials.

Question ID #12030: A woman comes to family therapy with her three daughters, ages 10, 13, and 19, all of whom live at home with the woman and their father. During the third therapy session, the 19-year-old tells you that her father began sexually molesting her when she was 13 years old. When you ask the younger girls if their father has ever abused them, they are reluctant to say anything about their father, and the mother adamantly denies any knowledge of abuse. In this situation, you should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. advise the mother to contact the appropriate authorities
- ☐ B. file a report with the appropriate authorities yourself
- ☐ C. meet with the father to determine if he is abusing the younger daughters
- ☐ D. maintain confidentiality since the known victim of abuse is over 18 years old

The correct answer is B.

Whenever you acquire a reasonable suspicion in your professional capacity that a minor is being abused, you have a legal obligation to report the abuse. Therefore, you would be legally required to file a report with the appropriate authorities.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. As a professional psychologist, you are required to report suspected abuse, and would not rely exclusively on a client who stated she filed a report.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Your responsibility lies in reporting the abuse, but not in investigating it. Addressing it with the father may interfere with the ability of proper authorities to investigate the concern.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. Although psychologists are not usually required to make a report when the individual is over the age of 18, in the situation described in the question, you would have reasonable suspicion that the younger sisters are also victims of abuse. Additional information about reporting child abuse is provided in the Ethics Manual of the written study materials.

Question ID #12032: You receive a letter from Mrs. Bisque's attorney asking you to testify on behalf of Mrs. Bisque in a divorce settlement regarding the custody of her children. You are aware that Mrs. Bisque's husband was recently admitted to a psychiatric hospital in another city. You should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. make a recommendation based on your knowledge that Mr. Bisque is obviously unable to have custody of the children
- ☐ B. make a recommendation based on an interview with Mrs. Bisque and her children
- ☐ C. refuse to make a recommendation since psychologists are not supposed to make specific custody recommendations
- ☐ D. refuse to make a specific recommendation about custody unless you can evaluate the entire family

The correct answer is D.

Although it is not unethical to provide information (e.g., test results) about a single party in a custody dispute, it would be unethical to make a recommendation about custody based on incomplete information. An accepted standard of practice in custody situations is that a psychologist should not make a recommendation for custody unless the psychologist has evaluated all parties. This is consistent with the requirements of Standard 9.01 of APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.13 of the Canadian Code of Ethics and with the provisions of the APA's Guidelines for Child Custody Evaluations in Divorce Proceedings.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. The question does not indicate you have any knowledge of Mr. Bisque as a parent, given it does not state you conducted an evaluation of the family.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. An interview with one parent is an insufficient basis on which to make a custody recommendation.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Psychologists may make recommendations regarding child custody provided they follow the ethical and practice guidelines cited above.

Question ID #12036: You receive a request from a psychologist working at a mental health crisis unit for information about a former client of yours who left three months ago with an outstanding balance of $500. Due to an emergency situation, the client has been admitted as an inpatient and has signed a release. You tell the psychologist that you will provide her with the information she has requested only after the client has made arrangements for paying his bill. You have _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. acted ethically as long as you had informed the client of your policy regarding unpaid fees
- ☐ B. acted ethically since the client has violated your implicit contract with him to pay the fee for the services you provided to him
- ☐ C. acted ethically since this action is not covered by the ethical guidelines
- ☐ D. acted unethically

The correct answer is D.

In this situation, the former client's records are needed for an emergency situation as the client has been admitted as an inpatient to a mental health crisis unit.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. The ethical guidelines prohibit "holding a client's records hostage" because the client has not paid his or her bill when these records are requested and needed for emergency treatment.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Again, withholding the client's records because of an outstanding bill would be unethical.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. See Standard 6.03 of the APA's Ethics Code which explicitly prohibits this practice and Principles II.1 and 2 of the Canadian Code of Ethics which require psychologists to promote the welfare of clients and to avoid harming them.

Question ID #12038: Kameko K., a psychology intern, administers psychological tests for a community mental health clinic, but her supervisor always scores the tests and interprets the results. When preparing the psychological report for these clients, the supervisor does not indicate that the intern administered the tests. This is _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. ethical because the supervisor scored and interpreted the tests
- ☐ B. ethical because the supervisor is responsible for the accuracy of the psychological report
- ☐ C. unethical because an intern should not be administering psychological tests
- ☐ D. unethical because the intern should be listed as the examiner in the report

The correct answer is D.

This issue is not directly addressed by ethical guidelines, so the best approach when choosing the answer would be to identify the one that is most consistent with the "spirit" of the guidelines. In this case, Standard 5.01(b) of the APA's Ethics Code prohibits psychologists from making misleading statements, and Standard 6.06 requires psychologists to provide accurate information to payors and funding sources. It is also consistent with Principles III.1 and 5 of the Canadian Code of Ethics.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. In the interest of reporting accurate information, the psychologist should list the clinician who administered the tests.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Administering, scoring, and interpreting test results are critical components of a psychological evaluation. To withhold the contributions of a clinician would not be in keeping with ethical requirements.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Provided interns are trained in test administration, it is ethical for them to administer psychological tests under supervision.

Question ID #12039: A client of Dr. William Wong who has been in therapy for six months is currently the defendant in a court case. The client's attorney contacts Dr. Wong, requesting that he provide her with information regarding diagnosis and treatment progress. Dr. Wong should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. release the information as requested since privilege is waived in this situation
- ☐ B. release only the information he believes is relevant to the client's case
- ☐ C. release the information since the request came from the client's attorney
- ☐ D. discuss the release with the client before taking any additional action

The correct answer is D.

The release of confidential client information ordinarily requires a waiver of confidentiality from the client. Privilege may or may not be waived in this situation. Dr. Wong should discuss the release of confidential information and obtain a waiver from the client before sharing information with the attorney.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect because it fails to prioritize confidentiality as the primary concern.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Again, Dr. Wong needs to confirm the client intends to release information to the attorney.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Even though the client's attorney has contacted Dr. Wong, a release is still required. Dr. Wong cannot determine whether the client intends to release information without consulting with her.

Question ID #12040: During a discussion with a 4th-grade teacher, the teacher tells a school psychologist that one of her students is constantly disrupting the class. After evaluating the child and obtaining more information about the situation, the school psychologist concludes that the teacher's approach with the child is part of the problem. Consequently, the school psychologist should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. make an appointment with the principal to discuss the teacher's approach
- ☐ B. explain to the teacher how her approach may be exacerbating the problem
- ☐ C. recommend that he (the therapist) start counseling the child on a regular basis
- ☐ D. recommend that the child be transferred to another classroom

The correct answer is B.

Although this situation is not explicitly addressed by ethical guidelines, the APA's Ethics Code and the Canadian Code of Ethics require psychologists to cooperate with other professionals. School psychologists must often act as a coordinator to bring together a variety of people and resources to resolve problems. Of the answers given, this one is most in line with the child's best interests and the school psychologist's responsibility to work with all people involved in the case.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. General Principle B of the APA's Ethics Code states that "psychologists consult with, refer to, or cooperate with other professionals and institutions to the extent needed to serve the best interests of those with whom they work." The child's teacher is the most directly involved professional, and given that she asked for help, it makes sense to start with her.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. The question indicates the teacher's behavior is contributing to the problem. Depending on the child's situation, individual therapy may be appropriate at some point, but this is not the best answer.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. Because the teacher asked for assistance, it makes sense, to begin with advising her what she can do differently. Moving the child to a different classroom could be more disruptive for the child. This is not a reasonable choice.

Question ID #12041: To serve as an expert witness in a court case, a psychologist must _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. be board certified as an expert witness
- ☐ B. be qualified by the court to offer opinions and conclusions about the case
- ☐ C. have been hired by the person he/she will be testifying about
- ☐ D. testify only about what he/she personally observed or obtained

The correct answer is B.

An expert witness is a person who, because of his/her special training, knowledge, or experience, is qualified to offer an opinion as testimony in a court proceeding.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Board certification is not required to serve as an expert witness.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Whether the psychologist is hired by the subject of his or her testimony is irrelevant.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. A lay witness or eyewitness testifies regarding what he or she personally observed.

Question ID #12042: Sally, age 14, tells her therapist that she wants to die and that she has access to her mother's sleeping medication. The therapist believes that Sally's threat is serious and tells Sally that he'll have to contact her parents. Sally states their agreement when beginning therapy was that all information provided would be confidential. If the therapist contacts Sally's parents, he has acted _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. unethically if Sally was, in fact, told that confidentiality would be maintained
- ☐ B. unethically if he contacts Sally's parents without first obtaining Sally's consent to do so
- ☐ C. ethically as long as the limits of confidentiality were discussed with Sally at the outset of therapy
- ☐ D. ethically since a breach of confidentiality is justified when a client is threatening suicide

The correct answer is D.

Psychologists are legally and ethically obligated to breach confidentiality whenever a client is believed to be a danger to themselves. With respect to choosing to tell her parents, the therapist acted ethically regardless of whether or not they clearly explained the limits of confidentiality at the start of therapy.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Psychologists must take appropriate action whenever a client is suicidal.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Because Sally is a minor, contacting her parents would be an appropriate action.

Answer C: While psychologists should discuss the limits of confidentiality, whether or not this discussion took place, the psychologist should still contact the parents to protect Sally.

Question ID #12043: You receive a call from Mrs. Wang who is very upset because her 14-year-old daughter witnessed an assault of her best friend three days ago and is distraught. Her daughter has not slept, declines to eat, and is consistently tearful. You have limited experience working with adolescents and in providing crisis intervention. However, you are the most experienced psychologist in the community. As an ethical psychologist, you will _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. agree to see Mrs. Wang's daughter in therapy since you've had some experience providing crisis intervention experiences
- ☐ B. inform Mrs. Wang about your lack of experience and let her decide if she wants you to provide therapy to her daughter
- ☐ C. inform Mrs. Wang that you cannot see her daughter because of your lack of experience
- ☐ D. see Mrs. Wang's daughter in therapy only until the crisis has ended or until you locate alternative services

The correct answer is D.

This answer is most consistent with ethical requirements. 2.02 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.8 of the Canadian Code of Ethics apply to this situation. 2.02 of the Ethics Code, for example, states that "in emergencies, when psychologists provide services to individuals for whom other mental health services are not available and for which psychologists have not obtained the necessary training, psychologists may provide such services in order to ensure that services are not denied. The services are discontinued as soon as the emergency has ended or appropriate services are available."

Answer A: This answer is incorrect because it does not take into account the limited services that would be provided to address an emergency situation.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. The psychologist needs to determine the degree to which she or he can address the client's needs given the crisis.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. The ethical guidelines allow for flexibility in the case of a psychologist responding to an emergency situation on a short-term basis.

Question ID #12044: Which of the following is true about the use of deception in research studies that may cause participants pain?

Select one:

- ☐ A. Deception is acceptable in studies that may cause pain only when the use of pain is justified by the study's potential value.
- ☐ B. Deception is acceptable in studies that may cause pain only when there are no alternative methods for conducting a study.
- ☐ C. Deception is prohibited when the pain is physical but not when it is psychological in nature.
- ☐ D. Deception is prohibited whether the pain is physical or psychological in nature.

The correct answer is D.

This answer is most consistent with Standard 8.07(b) of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle III.24 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Standard 8.07(b), for example, states that "psychologists do not deceive prospective participants about research that is reasonably expected to cause physical pain or severe emotional distress." Pain in research is acceptable only when certain conditions are met.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. When pain is expected, the ethical guidelines do not weigh the potential contributions of the study.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. It does not align with ethical mandates.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. The ethical standards prohibiting deception apply to both physical and emotional pain.

Question ID #12046: Dr. Calvin Claymore, a licensed psychologist, regularly waives the co-payment for low-income clients whose therapy fees are covered by insurance. This practice is:

Select one:

- ☐ A. ethical only if the insurance company has agreed to this arrangement
- ☐ B. ethical since it is in the best interests of low-income clients
- ☐ C. ethical as long as Dr. Claymore does not bill the insurance company for an increased hourly fee in order to collect her full fee
- ☐ D. ethical as long as the insurance company does not explicitly prohibit this arrangement

The correct answer is A.

The practice described in this question represents insurance fraud, which is both unethical and illegal. Most insurance companies agree to pay a specific percentage of a psychologist's fee but, when the co-payment is waived, this means the insurance company is paying the entire fee. Consequently, regularly waiving the co-payment without the permission of the insurance company represents insurance fraud.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. A psychologist who waives the co-payment when the insurance company has not agreed to the arrangement is engaging in insurance fraud.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Insurance companies that require patients to submit a co-payment mandate psychologists bill the patient for his or her share.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. Psychologists who waive the co-pay because an insurance company has not explicitly prohibited it, risk insurance fraud, which has serious legal and financial penalties.

Question ID #12053: A psychologist receives a phone call from a person with whom the psychologist had an intimate relationship for a short period of time over two years ago. The relationship ended amicably, and this person wants to start therapy with the psychologist. With regard to ethical requirements, which of the following is true about this situation?

Select one:

- ☐ A. It would be ethical to begin therapy with this person as long as the psychologist does not revive their previous personal relationship.
- ☐ B. It would be ethical to begin therapy with this person since two years have passed since the end of the relationship.
- ☐ C. It would be ethical to begin therapy with this person as long as the psychologist discusses the potential conflicts of interest during the informed consent process.
- ☐ D. It would be unethical to begin therapy with this person.

The correct answer is D.

This answer is most consistent with Standard 10.07, which explicitly prohibits psychologists from accepting former sexual partners as therapy clients, and Principle III.33 which prohibits multiple relationships that might impair a psychologist's objectivity.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. The APA ethical guidelines are clear that psychologists do not accept clients who are former sexual partners.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. There is no two-year timeframe for beginning therapy with former romantic partners, as ethical mandates forbid such arrangements.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Again, the ethical guidelines clearly prohibit therapeutic relationships with former sexual partners.

Question ID #12054: When conducting research with human participants, a psychologist should be aware that _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. participants must be debriefed as soon as possible after their participation in the study, especially when the study has involved deception
- ☐ B. participants must be debriefed after their participation in the study only if the psychologist believes that not doing so will result in harm to them
- ☐ C. participants may be debriefed after their participation when deception occurs
- ☐ D. participants must be debriefed after their participation only if the study places them at high risk

The correct answer is A.

Debriefing of research participants is addressed in Standard 8.08 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principles II.44 and III.26 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Standard 8.08 of the Ethics Code requires psychologists to inform participants promptly following their participation in the study about its nature, results, and conclusions; and Principle III.26 of the Canadian Code of Ethics requires psychologists to debrief participants as soon as possible after their involvement in a study when there has been incomplete disclosure about the study's purpose. Consequently, of the answers given, this one is most consistent with ethical guidelines.

Answer B: Weighing perceived harm is not included in the language of the ethics codes regarding debriefing participants.

Answer C: Debriefing is always required when deception is used in research studies.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect, as the guidelines require participants to be debriefed as soon as possible when they have participated in a study where deception was used.

Question ID #12055: A psychologist should be aware that information contained in client records _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. is protected by law and can never be disclosed without the client's consent
- ☐ B. is the property of the psychologist and cannot be disclosed without his/her consent
- ☐ C. is the joint property of the psychologist and client and cannot be disclosed without the consent of both
- ☐ D. is not free from disclosure all of the time, regardless of the wishes of the client or the psychologist

The correct answer is D.

Confidentiality of client information is waived in certain situations in the military and privilege is waived in certain legally defined situations. Therefore, this is the best answer choice.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. There are some situations when client information must be released, despite the wishes of the client or the psychologist. Record ownership and access are governed by legal guidelines.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. In most jurisdictions, the laws grant ownership of the physical record to the practitioner but give clients the right to have access to the information contained in the record.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. There are times when other individuals or entities have the right to access client information.

Question ID #12057: A psychologist in private practice is going through a difficult divorce and, as a result, has started drinking and is often depressed. He should do which of the following?

Select one:

- ☐ A. plunge deeper into his work to take his mind off his own problems
- ☐ B. seek professional consultation and consider temporarily suspending his practice
- ☐ C. explain the situation to his clients and offer to refer them to other therapists
- ☐ D. immediately refer his clients to other therapists

The correct answer is B.

This issue is addressed by Standard 2.06(b) of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.11 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. According to the APA Ethics Code, the psychologist should take appropriate action, which may include, "obtaining professional consultation or assistance ... to determine whether they should limit, suspend, or terminate their work-related duties" [Ethics Code, Standard 2.06(b)]. Psychologists do not necessarily have to abandon their professional practice when experiencing a period of personal distress. However, when personal problems may be adversely affecting the welfare of their clients, psychologists must take appropriate action.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Seeking consultation with another professional is the best answer.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. This may be necessary at some point, but the best initial step would be to seek consultation to determine the most appropriate course of action.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. Seeking professional consultation would be the appropriate first step.

Question ID #12059: A psychology intern offers his supervisor a chance to invest in a real estate business. The supervisor

Select one:

- ☐ A. should consult a colleague regarding this decision
- ☐ B. should invest but only in his wife's name
- ☐ C. should refuse to invest
- ☐ D. should report the intern to the ethics committee

The correct answer is C.

Multiple relationships are addressed in Standard 3.05 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle III.33 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Standard 3.05 states that "a psychologist refrains from entering into multiple relationships if the multiple relationships could reasonably be expected to impair the psychologist's objectivity, competence, or effectiveness in performing his or her functions as a psychologist, or otherwise risks exploitation or harm to the person with whom the professional relationship exists." Principle III.33 of the Canadian Code of Ethics includes a similar requirement. The situation described in this question represents a multiple (dual) relationship that could potentially impact the psychologist's ability to remain objective when acting as a supervisor for the intern.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Ethics codes clearly direct psychologists to avoid multiple relationships that will compromise their objectivity.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Any financial entanglement with a supervisee significantly risks compromise in the psychologist's competence and objectivity.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. It would be a better strategy for the supervisor to educate the intern about multiple relationships rather than report the intern to the ethics committee.

Question ID #12060: Dr. Molly Mendez, a well-known behavioral psychologist, is asked by her secretary if she would be willing to provide him with therapy to overcome gambling addiction. If Dr. Mendez agrees to do so, she will be acting _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. ethically as long as she has expertise in treating gambling addiction
- ☐ B. ethically as long as she charges the secretary her usual fee for psychological services
- ☐ C. unethically since doing so is likely to create an unacceptable multiple relationship
- ☐ D. unethically since maintaining the secretary's confidentiality will be difficult in this situation

The correct answer is C.

The situation described in this question represents a multiple relationship. Multiple relationships are addressed in Standard 3.05 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle III.33 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. These guidelines prohibit multiple relationships that could be expected to impair a psychologist's objectivity, which is a potential problem in this situation since the roles of employer and therapist would continue simultaneously over an extended period of time.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect as Dr. Mendez would be acting as both employer and therapist if she agrees to see her secretary in therapy.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect because it does not address the potentially harmful multiple relationship described in this question.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect because this answer fails to take into account the primary ethical dilemma presented.

Question ID #12061: Dr. Dennis Jones, in having a casual talk with a colleague, takes an idea from their conversation and decides to design and conduct a study to follow-up on the idea. When publishing the results of the study, it would be best for Dr. Jones to _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. offer his colleague joint authorship as first author
- ☐ B. offer his colleague joint authorship as second author
- ☐ C. acknowledge his colleague's contribution in a footnote or introductory statement
- ☐ D. publish the study without acknowledging his colleague since the colleague's contribution was minor

The correct answer is C.

This issue is addressed by Standard 8.12 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle III.7 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Standard 8.12(b) states that publication credit must "accurately reflect the relative scientific or professional contributions of the individuals involved, regardless of their relative status"; and Principle III.7 states that psychologists "give credit for work done or ideas contributed by others ... in proportion to their contribution."

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. While the idea for the study came from the colleague, she did not participate in designing or carrying out the study and it would be acceptable to acknowledge her contribution in an introductory statement or footnote. This answer is incorrect.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. If the colleague does not contribute to the study by means of conducting or writing up the study, a footnote is sufficient.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. The ethical guidelines clearly address giving publication credit relative to another's contributions.

Question ID #12062: A psychologist is writing a book for distribution and illustrates the section on projective personality tests with a number of pictures used in the Hand Test. This use of test materials in this way is _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. clearly unethical because it compromises the usefulness of the test
- ☐ B. ethical only if the publisher of the book has accepted responsibility for including the pictures
- ☐ C. ethical since the Hand Test is not a commonly used psychological test
- ☐ D. professionally questionable but not covered by ethical guidelines

The correct answer is A.

This answer is most consistent with the provisions of Standard 9.11 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle IV.11 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Standard 9.11 states that "psychologists make reasonable efforts to maintain the integrity and security of test materials and other assessment techniques"; and Principle IV.11 states that psychologists "protect the skills, knowledge, and interpretations of psychology from being misused, used incompetently, or made useless (e.g., loss of security of assessment techniques) by others."

Answer B: This answer is incorrect as it fails to take into account test security.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Whether a test is used frequently or not is irrelevant to the ethical question in this question.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect, given the ethical guidelines prioritize the integrity and security of test materials.

Question ID #12066: Dr. Beatrice Bowen, a licensed psychologist, has been contacted by a company to evaluate job applicants. The job will involve administering projective tests to applicants for an accountant position to determine their sexual orientation. Dr. Bowen should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. not accept the job because the evaluation she is being requested to conduct represents an invasion of privacy
- ☐ B. not accept the job because projective tests have been shown to be unreliable and invalid
- ☐ C. accept the job and administer the tests as required but explain their purpose to all applicants before doing so
- ☐ D. accept the job, administer the tests as required, and report the results to the company

The correct answer is A.

Sexual orientation is not relevant to the ability to perform an accountant job successfully, and to seek such information as part of a job-related assessment is clearly an invasion of privacy. Standard 9.04(b) of the APA's Ethics Code, for example, states that "psychologists may refrain from releasing test data to protect a client/patient or others from substantial harm or misuse or misrepresentation of the data or the test"; and Principle 1.38 of the Canadian Code of Ethics states that psychologists "take care not to infringe ... on the personal, developmentally, or culturally defined private space of individuals or groups unless clear permission is granted to do so."

Answer B: This answer is incorrect, as it fails to address the primary ethical conflict presented.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect, given it does not acknowledge the unethical nature of the request.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect and not consistent with ethical guidelines.

Select one:

- ☐ A. tell her that she cannot do so
- ☐ B. tell her that she can quit but that she needs to consider the legal ramifications of doing so
- ☐ C. tell her that her desire to quit is normal resistance and that she should come to therapy for at least two more sessions before making a decision
- ☐ D. call her probation officer immediately

The correct answer is B.

The situation described in this question is addressed by Standard 3.07 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle I.26 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. This answer is most consistent with Standard 3.07 and Principle I.26, which address a psychologist's responsibilities when providing services at the request of a third party. In this situation, the psychologist must ensure that the client understands what legal sanctions she may face if she does not stay in therapy.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. The client may quit therapy, but there will be legal consequences as a result.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect as it overlooks the critical ethical issue inherent in this situation.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect, as it is aligned with neither ethical nor legal mandates.

Select one:

- ☐ A. testamentary guardian
- ☐ B. guardian ad litem
- ☐ C. conservator of a minor
- ☐ D. special conservator

The correct answer is B.

The description presented in this question best describes a guardian ad litem who is appointed by the court for a specific purpose, such as to make decisions for someone who is incapable of doing so. Additional information about guardianship is provided in the Ethics Manual of the written study materials.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. A testamentary guardian is a person who is appointed in a deed or will to serve as guardian of a minor or disabled person.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. A conservator of a minor is responsible for managing the minor's finances.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. A special conservator carries out the terms of preliminary protective orders.

Question ID #12071: Dr. Dolores Del Rio has been seeing Jeff J. in therapy for four months. For the last month, Jeff has complained about the progress he is making in therapy, and Dr. Del Rio has responded by working with him to modify treatment goals. In the last therapy session, however, Jeff stated that he is not happy with therapy. Dr. Del Rio's best course of action would be to _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. recognize that Jeff's concerns are a normal reaction to the changes he is making as the result of therapy
- ☐ B. make a clinical decision as to whether or not Jeff is actually benefiting from therapy and, if he is, encourage him to continue with therapy for at least several more sessions
- ☐ C. discuss Jeff's continued dissatisfaction with him and the possibility of terminating therapy
- ☐ D. tell Jeff that she is ethically required to terminate therapy with him since he is not satisfied with the progress he is making

The correct answer is C.

This question addresses the issue of terminating therapy when a client does not seem to be benefiting from it. This is the best answer of those given because it takes the client's welfare into consideration and is most consistent with ethical guidelines regarding termination of professional services [see Standard 10.10(a) of the APA's Ethics Code or Principle II.37 of the Canadian Code of Ethics].

Answer A: The client's dissatisfaction may be related to several different factors, but the critical ethical issue in this question deals with the matter of terminating therapy.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Given the client's concerns expressed over a month and the fact that the therapist has already adjusted treatment goals, it is best to discuss termination with the client.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect because it fails to take into account the need for further discussion between the client and therapist.

Question ID #12073: Dr. Donald Jackson is starting a therapy group for recently divorced men. He tells the editor of the local newspaper, who has just divorced his wife, that he can attend the group for free if the editor includes an article about the program in the newspaper. Dr. Jackson has acted _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. ethically since his request does not violate ethical guidelines
- ☐ B. ethically as long as the editor accurately describes the program
- ☐ C. unethically because his request is exploitative and violates ethical guidelines
- ☐ D. unethically only if the arrangement negatively impacts his objectivity when working with the editor in therapy

The correct answer is C.

Of the answers given, this one is most consistent with ethical guidelines. Standard 5.02(b) of the APA Ethics Code prohibits psychologists from compensating "employees of press, radio, television, or other communication media in return for publicity in a news item." Principle III.31 of the Canadian Code of Ethics prohibits psychologists from exploiting "any relationship established as a psychologist to further personal, political, or business interests at the expense of the best interests of their clients."

Answer A: Incorrect, because offering therapy in exchange for free publicity violates ethical guidelines.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect because it fails to address the ethical conflict inherent in offering therapy in exchange for coverage in the newspaper.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect as the psychologist would not want to engage in any arrangement that might impact his objectivity.

Question ID #12074: You are hired as a psychology adjunct professor to teach a course at a graduate school. Which of the following are you ethically required to do in this case?

Select one:

- ☐ A. provide accurate information about the course content and be sure it is available for all interested parties
- ☐ B. confirm that the course content addresses the most recent research and theory in the area
- ☐ C. confirm that the course content addresses the interests of the students who enroll in the class
- ☐ D. allow students an opportunity to evaluate you at the end of the semester

The correct answer is A.

This issue is addressed by Standard 7.02 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle III.5 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Ethical guidelines explicitly require psychologists to provide interested parties (in this case, the school administration and the students) with accurate and complete information about the course content.

Answer B: Incorrect, because although presenting the most recent research and theory is usually a good idea, the importance of doing so would depend on the nature of the class. For example, recent research and theory would not be covered in a "history of psychology" class.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect because the interests of the students do not necessarily coincide with the content that you, as the instructor, believe is important to present.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. Providing students with opportunities to evaluate the course is desirable but is not required by ethical guidelines.

Question ID #12075: In general, which of the following is considered the "best defense" for a psychologist who is being sued for malpractice?

Select one:

- ☐ A. adequate records
- ☐ B. a signed informed consent
- ☐ C. providing state-of-the-art services
- ☐ D. good malpractice insurance

The correct answer is A.

Most experts agree that good record-keeping is the best defense for practitioners in cases of litigation. In addition to being familiar with relevant laws and ethical guidelines, the best way to reduce vulnerability to malpractice is maintaining adequate records.

Answer B is incorrect. While documenting informed consent is required by ethical standards, the practice alone does not provide a better defense than accurate and detailed case records.

Answer C is incorrect. Adequate records are the best defense in the event of litigation.

Answer D is incorrect because while good malpractice insurance is usually wise, it will only help protect the clinician from fees incurred and will not impact the outcome of litigation.

Question ID #12077: A 26-year-old client you have been seeing for two months unexpectedly admits to you that he had sexual relations with the 15-year old daughter of his neighbor six months ago. He says that he knows what he did was wrong and that he will never do it again. You should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. maintain the client's confidentiality
- ☐ B. report the client to the appropriate authorities
- ☐ C. alert the parents of his victim
- ☐ D. report the client to the appropriate authorities and alert the parents of his victim

The correct answer is B.

In cases of known and suspected child abuse, a psychologist is legally and ethically required to make a report to the appropriate authorities.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. As mandated reporters, psychologists are required by law to report child abuse.

Answer C: This does not account for the psychologist's duty to report known or suspected child abuse to the appropriate authorities.

Answer D: This may result in breaching the client's confidentiality.

Question ID #12078: A consulting firm hired Dr. Sam Stone to assist with an ongoing research project. Dr. Stone works under the project director, Dr. Thompson, an organizational psychologist. Dr. Thompson asks Dr. Stone to review the preliminary report she has prepared for the project; and, in doing so, Dr. Stone discovers that some of the reported data is misleading and inaccurate. Dr. Stone expresses his concerns to Dr. Thompson and is told that "it will be taken care of." Subsequently, Dr. Stone learns that the report was submitted to the company without any changes. Dr. Stone reviews the ethical guidelines and decides that pursuing the matter further isn't necessary. Dr. Stone's conclusion is _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. correct since this situation is not covered by ethical guidelines
- ☐ B. correct since he has already attempted to resolve the matter in an informal manner as proscribed by ethical guidelines
- ☐ C. correct since it is the project directors responsibility to provide the company with complete and accurate data
- ☐ D. incorrect because he has a responsibility to ensure that the company is provided with complete and accurate data

The correct answer is D.

This issue is addressed by Standard 1.01 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.5 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Answer D is most consistent with the "spirit" of these guidelines. Specifically, Standard 1.01 of the Ethics Code states that "if psychologists learn of misuse or misinterpretation of their work, they take reasonable steps to correct or minimize the misuse or misrepresentation." Principle II.5 of the Canadian Code of Ethics, states that psychologists "make every reasonable effort to ensure that psychological knowledge is not misused, intentionally or unintentionally, to harm others." (Also see Standard 5.01 of the Ethics Code and Principle III.1 of the Canadian Code of Ethics.)

Answer A: Ethical guidelines address the importance of psychologists representing their work accurately.

Answer B: Even though Dr. Stone made an attempt to resolve the discrepancy, the company still received inaccurate data and should be made aware.

Answer C: Dr. Stone needs to take additional steps to address the misrepresentation of data.

Question ID #12081: The mother of a 31-year-old client that you have been providing therapy to for six months calls to check on her son's progress. She says that she is very concerned about her son and wants to know if there is anything she can do to help him. As an ethical psychologist, you _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. advise her in general terms about how she can help her son
- ☐ B. suggest that she make an appointment so you can discuss the matter in person
- ☐ C. suggest that she come to therapy with her son at his next appointment
- ☐ D. tell her that you cannot discuss her son's condition with her

The correct answer is D.

This question addresses the issue of client confidentiality. The client is an adult, and unless a release of information allowing communication between the psychologist and the client's mother is on file, it would be unethical to release information to her. The ideal correct response is to not even acknowledge that the son is a client, but because that option is not available, this is the next best response.

Answer A: Releasing information without the client's consent is unethical.

Answer B. A psychologist should not release information over the phone or in person with the mother.

Answer C. Giving the mother any information about her adult son would represent a breach of confidentiality.

Question ID #12084: Dr. Karen Kempfer, a licensed psychologist who specializes in couples and marriage therapy, has a confirmed stage 4 cancer diagnosis. She is incredibly upset by this diagnosis. In terms of ethical requirements, Dr. Kempfer _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. should seek supervision
- ☐ B. should refrain from participating in any professional activities that might be adversely affected by her medical condition
- ☐ C. should inform her therapy clients of her medical condition so that they can decide whether they want to continue seeing her
- ☐ D. is not obligated to take any precautions due to her medical condition

The correct answer is B.

Standard 2.06 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.11 of the Canadian Code of Ethics apply to the situation described in this question. This answer is most consistent with ethical guidelines that address the impact of a psychologist's social, emotional, and health-related problems on their professional services. Standard 2.06 requires psychologists to "refrain from initiating an activity when they know or should know there is a substantial likelihood that their personal problems will prevent them from performing their work-related activities in a competent manner"; and Principle II.11 similarly requires psychologists to obtain appropriate help and/or discontinue professional activities when "a physical or psychological condition reduces their ability to benefit and not harm others."

Answer A: Although Dr. Kempfer should take appropriate action if she believes her condition may interfere with her effectiveness as a therapist, this response is too vague.

Answer C: It is not necessary for Dr. Kempfer to inform her clients of her condition.

Answer D: Dr. Kempfer would want to take some action if her medical condition is impacting her ability to provide effective psychological services.

Question ID #12085: To be consistent with ethical requirements, David DeFoe, a psychology intern, must do which of the following?

Select one:

- ☐ A. He must tell his clients that he is a psychology intern.
- ☐ B. He may tell his clients that his work is being supervised.
- ☐ C. He must provide clients with information about his education and experience.
- ☐ D. He must indicate his status on his business card.

The correct answer is A.

Standard 10.01 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle III.22 of the Canadian Code of Ethics apply to the situation described in this question. This answer is most consistent with ethical guidelines that require interns (trainees) to inform their clients of their professional status.

Answer B: Note that Standard 10.01(c) of the Ethics Code also requires that Mr. DeFoe provide clients with the name of his supervisor. To simply say he, "may" tell negates the fact that this is an ethical requirement.

Answer C. This answer is incorrect. While an intern may provide this information, this answer fails to address the most important aspect of a trainee's ethical requirement.

Answer D. This answer is incorrect because it misses the more critical aspect of the intern's responsibility, which is to inform the client of his status as an intern.

Question ID #12086: Dr. Amanda Alto's long-term client is suddenly fired from her job and can no longer afford Dr. Alto's fee. The client suggests that she babysit for Dr. Alto's children in exchange for therapy. In terms of ethical guidelines, this exchange would be _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. ethical
- ☐ B. ethical only if Dr. Alto discusses the potential for conflict with the client
- ☐ C. ethical only if a fair market value is established for the client's babysitting services.
- ☐ D. unethical

The correct answer is D.

The situation described in this question is addressed by ethical guidelines related to multiple relationships and therapy fees. The arrangement would violate ethical guidelines regarding multiple relationships and therapy fees. With regard to multiple relationships, if Dr. Alto agrees to the arrangement, she will be acting as both therapist and employer, which may impair her ability to provide effective therapy to the client. In addition, the arrangement represents a form of barter (which is explicitly addressed by Standard 6.05 of the APA's Ethics Code and indirectly addressed by Principles II.1 and 2 of the Canadian Code of Ethics) that could also interfere with her objectivity.

Answer A is incorrect, given that the multiple relationships would interfere with Dr. Alto's ability to provide effective therapy to the client.

Answer B is incorrect, as Dr. Alto would not want to compromise her ability to provide effective therapy for her client.

Answer C is incorrect. Barter is permitted only when it will not impair a psychologist's objectivity.

Question ID #12087: Dr. Nancy Noonan plans to conduct a research study that will involve testing and interviewing psychiatric inpatients. Before beginning the study, she must obtain _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. informed consent from the hospital's administrator
- ☐ B. informed consents from the patients' legal guardians
- ☐ C. informed consent from the patients' legal guardian and assent from the patients
- ☐ D. assent from the patients

The correct answer is C.

Standards 3.10 and 8.02 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle I.35 of the Canadian Code of Ethics apply to the situation described in this question. The answers given to this question imply that the patients are unable to give informed consent to their participation in the study since this option is not provided in any of the answers. Therefore, the best answer concludes that whenever a person is unable to provide informed consent for participation in research (i.e., because he/she is incapable of doing so), a psychologist must obtain consent from the person's legal guardian and assent (agreement) from the person.

Answer A is incorrect. A hospital administrator has no legal authority to provide consent for patient participation.

Answer B is incorrect, as this answer is incomplete given it does not include the necessity of obtaining patient assent.

Answer D is incorrect as it does not include the importance of obtaining informed consent from the patients' legal guardians.

Question ID #12088: A psychology intern who has been working at a mental health clinic for the past six months tells you that his internship was suddenly terminated by his supervisor for "incompetence." He also says that he had not been given any warning that his performance was inadequate before being terminated. You tell the intern that _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. the supervisor's behavior seems unfair but is not addressed by ethical guidelines
- ☐ B. the supervisor's behavior is acceptable as long as the intern was given specific reasons for his termination
- ☐ C. the supervisor's behavior is acceptable as long as the reason for the intern's termination is valid
- ☐ D. the supervisor's behavior may have violated ethical guidelines regarding supervisee performance evaluations

The correct answer is D.

Although the termination of supervisees is not directly addressed by ethical guidelines, evaluating and providing feedback to supervisees is addressed by Standard 7.06 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.25 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. This answer is most consistent with ethical guidelines regarding evaluation and feedback as well as with more general provisions regarding the avoidance of harm (e.g., Standard 3.04 of the Ethics Code and Principles I.13 and II.2 of the Canadian Code of Ethics).

Answer A is incorrect as the APA Ethic's Code Standard 7.06 (a) states "psychologists establish a timely and specific process for providing feedback to students and supervisees. Information regarding the process is provided to the student at the beginning of supervision."

Answer B: This answer fails to address the broader issue regarding the delivery of timely feedback.

Answer C: This answer fails to address the broader issue regarding the delivery of timely feedback.

Question ID #12089: Which of the following best describes ethical guidelines regarding barter as a substitute for the collection of fees for professional psychological services?

Select one:

- ☐ A. Barter may be acceptable when certain conditions are met.
- ☐ B. The barter of goods (but not services) is prohibited by ethical guidelines.
- ☐ C. The barter of services (but not goods) is prohibited by ethical guidelines.
- ☐ D. Barter of any kind is prohibited by ethical guidelines.

The correct answer is A.

Barter is explicitly addressed by Standard 6.05 of the APA's Ethics Code and indirectly addressed by Principles III.31-33 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Barter is prohibited by Standard 6.05 of the APA's Ethics Code when it is clinically contraindicated or exploitative. In other words, in certain circumstances, barter may be acceptable. The Canadian Code of Ethics does not directly address barter but, to be consistent with the "spirit" of the Code, barter should be avoided when it may be harmful to the client.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect as ethical guidelines make no such distinction.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect as again, the ethical codes do not distinguish between bartering for goods and services.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect, given the ethical codes make allowance for barter under certain circumstances.

Question ID #12090: Which of the following is not a condition for a claim of malpractice against a psychologist?

Select one:

- ☐ A. The psychologist must have a duty to the client.
- ☐ B. There must be evidence that the psychologists' actions were not in the best interests of the client.
- ☐ C. The psychologist must have acted negligent or improperly.
- ☐ D. There must be a causal relationship between the psychologists' negligence and the harm claimed by the client.

The correct answer is B.

This is the correct response because it is the only one that is not required for a claim of malpractice against a psychologist. A claim of malpractice requires that four conditions be met: a duty to the client; a breach of that duty; harm to the patient; and a causal relationship between the breach of duty and harm to the patient.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect, as it names one of the four conditions for a malpractice claim.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect because it describes a condition for a claim of malpractice.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect because it names one of the four conditions of malpractice.

Question ID #12093: Dr. Kay Klein, a licensed psychologist, is preparing a brochure for her weekend workshop on "Effective Parenting Strategies for Single Parents." Included in the brochure are several testimonials from former workshop participants. According to ethical guidelines, the use of testimonials is _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. clearly ethical
- ☐ B. ethical if certain conditions are met
- ☐ C. unethical only when the testimonials are false or misleading
- ☐ D. clearly unethical

The correct answer is B.

The use of testimonials is addressed by Standard 5.05 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle III.31 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Standard 5.05 states that psychologists do not solicit testimonials "from current therapy clients/patients or other persons who because of their particular circumstances are vulnerable to undue influence"; and Principle III.31 prohibits psychologists from exploiting clients. Of the answers given, this one is most consistent with ethical guidelines.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect because using client testimonials is ethical only when certain conditions are met. This answer fails to account for the fact that publishing testimonials can sometimes be unethical.

Answer C: Although false or misleading testimonials would be unethical, this answer is not the best choice since it states that testimonials are unethical when they contain false or misleading information and does not address the ethical responsibilities inherent in obtaining client testimonials.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect, given that testimonials may be used under certain circumstances.

Question ID #12094: Malpractice is a tort involving which of the following?

Select one:

- ☐ A. failure to protect
- ☐ B. coercion
- ☐ C. negligence
- ☐ D. breach of contract

The correct answer is C.

A tort is civil wrongdoing resulting from a breach of duty. Malpractice is a civil tort involving a negligent breach of duty that results in harm to the client. Being familiar with the conditions for a claim of malpractice would have helped you identify this as the correct answer (see the Ethics Manual in the written study materials).

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Although a tort involves a breach of duty, it is not necessarily related to the duty to protect (although a failure to protect in certain legally defined situations might result in a claim of malpractice).

Answer B: This answer is incorrect, as coercion is not central to the definition of malpractice.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect as it does not address the larger issue of malpractice as a breach of duty.

Question ID #12095: Which of the following is responsible for the largest proportion of complaints filed with the APA's Ethics Committee?

Select one:

- ☐ A. sexual misconduct
- ☐ B. test misuse
- ☐ C. breach of confidentiality
- ☐ D. discrimination

The correct answer is A.

Although the types of actions that underlie complaints filed with the APA's Ethics Committee vary in number from year to year, one of the actions listed in the answers to this question has consistently been the most frequent cause of complaints. The 2009 Report of the Ethics Committee, for example, identifies sexual misconduct of an adult as being the behavior most commonly cited in cases opened by the Ethics Committee, which is consistent with previous reports. Test misuse, breach of confidentiality, and discrimination (answers b, c, and d) are causes of complaints but not as often as is sexual misconduct.

Answer B: Test misuse is among those complaints filed with the APA Ethics Committee, but it is cited less frequently than sexual misconduct.

Answer C: Breach of confidentiality is among those complaints filed with the APA Ethics Committee, but it is cited less frequently than sexual misconduct.

Answer D: Discrimination is among complaints filed with the APA Ethics Committee, but it is cited less frequently than sexual misconduct.

Question ID #12099: You are contacted by a defendant's attorney to evaluate the possibility of an insanity plea. Who is the "holder of the privilege" in this situation?

Select one:

- ☐ A. the defendant
- ☐ B. the defendant's attorney
- ☐ C. the court
- ☐ D. the psychologist

The correct answer is A.

Privilege is waived only in certain circumstances and even when it is waived, another person or agency does not become the "holder of the privilege." The defendant would still be the "holder of the privilege" even if the privilege is waived. In the situation described in this question, privilege would be waived only if the defendant actually claims insanity as his/her defense during the trial. Additional information on privilege is provided in the Ethics Manual in the written study materials.

Answer B: Incorrect. The defendant's attorney is not the "holder of the privilege."

Answer C: Incorrect. The court is not the "holder of the privilege."

Answer D: Incorrect. The client remains the "holder of the privilege" even if the privilege is waived.

Question ID #12100: Which of the following is most likely a violation of ethical guidelines?

Select one:

- ☐ A. A brochure containing client testimonials mailed to potential attendees at a conference for adult children of alcoholics.
- ☐ B. An advertisement offering a free initial therapy session that is published in the campus newspaper prior to final exams.
- ☐ C. Uninvited in-person solicitations for therapy of individuals whose homes were destroyed several months prior by a hurricane.
- ☐ D. A display ad for psychotherapy services in the yellow pages.

The correct answer is C.

Of the advertisements/solicitations described in the responses, only one is clearly prohibited by ethical guidelines. In-person solicitation of individuals who are vulnerable to undue influence is explicitly prohibited by Standard 5.06 of the APA's Ethics Code and is inconsistent with the "spirit" of the Canadian Code of Ethics (see, e.g., Principles I.27 and III.31).

Answer A: This answer is incorrect as testimonials are acceptable as long as they are not solicited from clients who are susceptible to undue influence (see Standard 5.05 of the APA's Ethics Code).

Answer B: This answer is incorrect, as free initial sessions are not prohibited by ethical guidelines.

Answer D: Ads in the yellow pages of the phone directory are not prohibited by ethical guidelines.

Question ID #12101: Dr. Snyder, a clinical psychologist, is planning to take a three-week cruise. In terms of his clinical practice, Dr. Snyder's best course of action would be _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. discuss his vacation plans with his current clients ahead of time so that they know he will be unavailable during that time
- ☐ B. give his clients a phone number where he can be reached
- ☐ C. give his clients the phone number of a colleague who has agreed to accept phone calls in emergencies
- ☐ D. hire a colleague to take over his appointments while he is on vacation

The correct answer is C.

Of the answers given, this one makes the most sense in terms of the client's welfare and Dr. Snyder's interests. To be consistent with ethical requirements (e.g., Standard 3.12 of the APA's Ethics Code), Dr. Snyder should make some kind of arrangements for his clients while he is on vacation.

Answer A: Simply informing his clients of his unavailability without arranging for crisis coverage would be insufficient and unethical.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Ethically, Dr. Snyder would not be required to be available by phone to his clients during his vacation. However, he would be required to provide clients with a contact for emergency situations.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. Dr. Snyder would not be required to provide alternative ongoing services for his clients.

Question ID #12103: Which of the following best describes the provisions of the APA's "Specialty Guidelines for Forensic Psychology" regarding contingency fees?

Select one:

- ☐ A. Contingent fees are acceptable as long as they are fair and equitable.
- ☐ B. Contingent fees are acceptable only for expert or fact witnesses who do not have a previous relationship with the person they are testifying about.
- ☐ C. Contingent fees should ordinarily be avoided.
- ☐ D. Contingent fees are not addressed by the Specialty Guidelines.

The correct answer is C.

Contingent fees are fees that depend on the outcome of a case and are often a percentage of the money the client receives. Contingent fees are addressed in Paragraph 5.02 of the "Specialty Guidelines," which states, "Forensic practitioners seek to avoid undue influence that might result from financial compensation or other gains. Because of the threat to impartiality presented by the acceptance of contingent fees and associated legal prohibitions, forensic practitioners strive to avoid providing professional services on the basis of contingent fees."

Answer A: This answer is incorrect given contingent fees to compromise a psychologist's ability to remain impartial.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect as practitioners, regardless of their role in the forensic proceedings, are discouraged from accepting contingent fees.

Answer D: Incorrect. The "Specialty Guidelines" include specific language regarding contingent fees.

Select one:

- ☐ A. the conduct of scientific research
- ☐ B. program development
- ☐ C. consultation related to assessment and intervention
- ☐ D. supervision of psychological services

The correct answer is A.

The APA and CPA guidelines are both very specific about the activities that constitute "psychological services." The conduct of scientific research is not included in the definition of psychological services.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect given program development is included.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect as consultation is included.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect, given supervision is included.

Question ID #12107: A psychologist realizes that one of her therapy clients is a co-owner of a company that just hired her as a consultant. To be consistent with ethical requirements, the psychologist should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. remedy the situation in a way that takes the client's best interests into account
- ☐ B. continue in both roles but discuss any problems when they occur
- ☐ C. terminate her role as a therapist or consultant
- ☐ D. terminate her role as a consultant

The correct answer is A.

This is a difficult question to answer since none of the answers is obviously incorrect. The best answer, however, is the one that comes closest to the actual language of the ethical guidelines. Standard 3.05(b) of the APA's Ethics Code states that, when a multiple relationship occurs, "the psychologist takes reasonable steps to resolve it with due regard for the best interests of the affected person and maximal compliance with the Ethics Code"; and the Values Statement of Principle III of the Canadian Code of Ethics contains similar language.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Discussing problems as they arise may be included in the final decision the psychologist makes, but this answer fails to account for the larger concerns inherent in this dilemma.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. It is unlikely that withdrawing from her role as a therapist would be in the client's best interest.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. Withdrawal from the consultant role may ultimately be a part of the psychologist's final decision, but this answer is less desirable than Answer A, which uses language from the ethics codes.

Question ID #12109: Within the context of sexual harassment, "quid pro quo" refers to _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. a situation in which an employee's response to sexual demands impacts his/her job
- ☐ B. the creation of a "hostile environment" as a result of sexually offensive conduct
- ☐ C. the judgment of a "reasonable woman" that an act is offensive
- ☐ D. overt sexual conduct

The correct answer is A.

Quid pro quo is one of the two legally recognized types of sexual harassment. Sexual harassment is addressed in Standard 3.02 of the APA's Ethics Code and described in the Ethics Manual in the written study materials. Quid pro quo sexual harassment occurs when a person's submission to or rejection of sexual advances affects his/her employment status.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. A hostile environment is, however, the second legally recognized type of sexual harassment.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect as it does not describe "quid pro quo."

Answer D: This answer is incorrect because it does not describe "quid pro quo."

Question ID #12110: You have been seeing Malcolm M. for several months and believe that the original issues that Malcolm came to therapy for have been successfully resolved. When you bring up the topic of termination with Malcolm, he says that he wants to continue therapy. In subsequent sessions, you and Malcolm are unable to come up with additional treatment goals. As an ethical psychologist, your best course of action would be to do which of the following?

Select one:

- ☐ A. tell Malcolm that you are ethically required to terminate therapy and reassure him that he'll be okay
- ☐ B. provide Malcolm with a brief period of pretermination counseling and discuss the reasons why termination is appropriate
- ☐ C. establish a contract with Malcolm for a maximum of three more months of therapy
- ☐ D. continue seeing Malcolm until he feels he is ready to terminate

The correct answer is B.

Ethical guidelines are very clear about situations in which a therapist believes that it is the appropriate time to terminate therapy. Standard 10.10 of the APA's Ethics Code requires psychologists to terminate therapy when it is "reasonably clear that the client/patient no longer needs the service" but to do so only after providing the appropriate pre-termination counseling. Principles III.31 and 37 of the Canadian Code of Ethics contain similar language.

Answer A: This answer is inconsistent with ethical guidelines. Pretermination counseling will explore the therapist's and client's perspectives on terminating treatment. Reassuring the client that he will be okay may not be appropriate, given the client's individual situation.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect as it fails to take into account the client's unique situation and does not adhere to ethical guidelines regarding termination.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect as it does not include direction provided by ethical guidelines regarding termination.

Question ID #12111: You are subpoenaed to appear at a deposition to testify about a former client of yours. During the deposition, the attorney for the opposing party asks you to provide confidential client information. You should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. ask the attorney to order you to release the information
- ☐ B. assert the privilege unless the client has signed a waiver
- ☐ C. provide the information if you believe it is pertinent to the case
- ☐ D. provide the information since privilege is waived in this situation

The correct answer is B.

Confidential client information should be revealed in a legal proceeding only when the client has signed a waiver or when the court has issued an order indicating that privilege is waived.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. You may provide the information if the client has signed a waiver. If the client's attorney is present, you may ask him or her if you should answer the question. However, if the attorney is not present, you should not provide the information without a waiver from the client but, instead, should assert the privilege on behalf of the client.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Without a signed waiver, the client's privilege should be protected, and you should not release information.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. There is no indication the client has waived privilege in this case.

Question ID #12112: You believe that one of your clients is exhibiting symptoms of PTSD. A new test for PTSD has been developed by a psychologist at the local university, and you would like to use the test to evaluate the client. However, the test is currently labeled "For Research Purposes Only." You should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. get permission to use the test from the psychologist who developed it
- ☐ B. get an informed consent from the client before administering the test
- ☐ C. make sure that you combine test results with other data you have collected
- ☐ D. not use the test

The correct answer is D.

Ethical guidelines require that tests be used only for the purposes for which they have been validated. "For research purposes only" implies that this test has not been validated for clinical use and, therefore, should not be used for that purpose.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect as it fails to address the ethical concern of whether an instrument has been approved for clinical use.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Informed consent, in this case, is less relevant than the correct usage of the test.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. If the instrument has not been evaluated for clinical application, you should not use it.

Question ID #12113: Which of the following is not an element of informed consent?

Select one:

- ☐ A. credibility
- ☐ B. comprehension
- ☐ C. voluntariness
- ☐ D. competence

The correct answer is A.

Legally, three conditions are required for consent to be truly "informed." Note that this question is asking for the element that is NOT required. In order for consent to be informed, the individual must have adequate information (knowledge) and be able to comprehend that information, must give consent voluntarily (without coercion), and must have the capacity to make rational decisions. Credibility is not one of the conditions for consent. Additional information on informed consent is provided in the Ethics Manual in the written study materials.

Answer B: Comprehension is required for informed consent.

Answer C: Voluntariness is required for informed consent.

Answer D: Competence is required for informed consent.

Question ID #12114: Psychologists are most likely to identify which of the following as the most frequent "ethically troubling issue" that they encounter in their professional practice?

Select one:

- ☐ A. conduct of colleagues
- ☐ B. confidentiality
- ☐ C. treatment termination
- ☐ D. intimacy

The correct answer is B.

The issues listed in the answers for this question were all identified as "ethically troubling issues" in a survey of psychologists by K. S. Pope and V. A. Vetter (1992). Of the 703 ethically troubling issues cited by psychologists in the study, the largest number (128) were related to confidentiality [Ethical dilemmas encountered by members of the American Psychological Association: A national survey, American Psychologist, 47 (3), 397-411].

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. The conduct of colleagues was cited as an issue of concern but was less frequently cited than confidentiality.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Treatment termination was listed, but with less frequency than confidentiality.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. Sexual issues were cited less frequently than confidentiality.

Question ID #12115: The Examination for Professional Practice in Psychology (EPPP) is best described as which of the following?

Select one:

- ☐ A. predictor of performance as a professional psychologist
- ☐ B. measure of basic knowledge of psychology
- ☐ C. measure of basic competence
- ☐ D. method for protecting the profession of psychology

The correct answer is B.

The EPPP is a requirement for licensure in the United States and Canada. The Association of State and Provincial Psychology Boards (ASPPB) describes the EPPP as a measure of "the knowledge that should have been acquired by any candidate who is seeking licensure to practice psychology."

Answer A: The EPPP is one of several measures used by licensing boards to evaluate a candidate's credentials. It does not predict future performance as a professional psychologist. The EPPP measures knowledge of psychology.

Answer C: The EPPP measures knowledge of psychological content.

Answer D: The EPPP is not designed to protect the profession of psychology.

Question ID #12116: In a research study that uses deception, participants are not told the exact nature of the study prior to their participation. In terms of ethical requirements, the investigator is obligated to do which of the following?

Select one:

- ☐ A. explain why participants were not informed in the presentation of his research findings
- ☐ B. explain the true nature of the study to all participants as soon as possible
- ☐ C. file a waiver of informed consent with the institutional review board prior to beginning the study
- ☐ D. do nothing out of the ordinary as long as the study is determined to be of significant scientific value

The correct answer is B.

The use of deception is not prohibited by ethical guidelines, but when it is used, it must be accompanied by certain actions. Guidelines for the use of deception are provided in Standard 8.07 of the APA's Ethics Code and are discussed in the Ethics Manual in the written study materials. When deception is necessary, participants must be provided with an explanation of the purpose of the study as soon as possible.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect because explaining why deception was necessary is not required by the ethical guidelines.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. This is not required by ethical guidelines.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect, since "significant scientific value" does not preclude explaining the true purpose of the study to participants as soon as possible.

Question ID #12120: A psychotherapist, who is a member of APA, uses business cards that include her sliding scale fee. This is _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. unethical because sliding scale fees cannot be addressed on a business card
- ☐ B. unethical because sliding scale fees are not allowed
- ☐ C. unethical because of APA membership
- ☐ D. ethical

The correct answer is D.

None of the information included in the psychologist's business card is prohibited by ethical guidelines. It is not unethical to charge clients on a sliding scale, and it would only be unethical to provide the first session free if there was some underlying coercion involved. It is also acceptable to list oneself as an APA member as long as it is not done in a way that is misleading.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Including information about fees or sliding scale fees is permissible.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Offering a free initial session is allowable provided no coercion is involved.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. Including APA membership is permissible.

Question ID #12122: A psychologist who already has an established therapeutic relationship with a child is asked to act as an expert witness in a divorce proceeding involving custody of the child. The psychologist's best course of action would be to _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. decline the request to testify
- ☐ B. agree to testify only if she obtains consent from both parents
- ☐ C. agree to testify only if she can evaluate all of the involved parties
- ☐ D. agree to testify only if her relationship will not bias her judgment

The correct answer is A.

The psychologist already has an established relationship with the child, which changes the situation in an important way. Since the psychologist has a therapeutic relationship with the child, it would be in the child's best interests for the psychologist to refrain from testifying. Instead, the psychologist's role should be to provide the child with continued support.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Even if both parents consent to her testimony, the psychologist would be engaging in multiple relationships which ordinarily should be avoided in custody cases. See Paragraph II.7 of the APA's "Guidelines for Child Custody Evaluations in Family Law Proceedings."

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. This would be the best course of action when a psychologist does not have a previous relationship with any of the involved parties.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. One of the reasons that the psychologist should not testify is because it might be difficult to be objective.

Question ID #12124: Your colleague, who is a licensed psychologist, confides that he has just ended a sexual relationship with one of his clients. As he describes the client, you realize that she is someone you referred to him 18 months ago. As an ethical psychologist, you should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. file a written complaint against the colleague
- ☐ B. file a complaint against the colleague with the Ethics Committee after informing him that you intend to do so
- ☐ C. discuss the matter further with the colleague to see what course of action he plans to take
- ☐ D. contact the client and discuss the matter with her

The correct answer is C.

Ethical violations by colleagues are addressed by Standards 1.04 and 1.05 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principles II.40 and 41 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Ethical guidelines require psychologists to address ethical violations by other psychologists, but to do so in a way that does not violate the confidentiality of the involved client. Standard 1.05 states "If an apparent ethical violation has substantially harmed or is likely to substantially harm a person or organization and is not appropriate for informal resolution ... psychologists take further action appropriate to the situation. Such action might include referral to state or national committees on professional ethics, to state licensing boards, or to the appropriate institutional authorities. This standard does not apply when an intervention would violate confidentiality rights." Therefore, this is the best course of action of those presented in the answers to this question.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Filing a complaint with the Ethics Committee would be unethical if it involved a breach of the client's confidentiality.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. Informing a colleague of a pending ethics report is not required by ethics codes.

Answer D: This answer is incorrect. The question does not say that you have a current professional relationship with the client and, even if you did, it would not be appropriate to confront her with this from both an ethical and clinical perspective.

Question ID #12125: A psychology professor at a large university asks a graduate student to assist on a research project in the students' field of interest. The student will be required to spend 25 hours a week on the project and will be paid on an hourly basis. With regard to publication credit, the professor, who is also a psychologist, should do which of the following when preparing a journal article about the study?

Select one:

- ☐ A. He should include the student as a co-author since the student is working more than half-time on the project.
- ☐ B. He should note the student's contribution in a footnote or introductory statement since the student is an employee.
- ☐ C. He does not need to mention the student's contribution since the student is an employee.
- ☐ D. He should acknowledge the student in a manner consistent with her contribution to the project.

The correct answer is: D.

This response is most consistent with ethical guidelines. Standard 8.12 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle III.7 of the Canadian Code of Ethics apply to the situation described in this question. Standard 8.12(b), for example, states that "principal authorship and other publication credits accurately reflect the relative scientific or professional contributions of the involved, regardless of their relative status."

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. Including the student would be necessary if the student made a major contribution to the project.

Answer B: This would be sufficient only if the student made a minor contribution to the project.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. The fact that the student is being paid for her participation in the research project does not preclude publication credit.

Question ID #12127: As a psychologist working in a multidisciplinary setting, you should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. develop professional and ethical standards for mental health services that do not recognize professional differences
- ☐ B. consult with your local ethics committee for permission to work with other professionals when developing professional and ethical standards for psychological services
- ☐ C. cooperate with other professionals to the extent needed, when adhering to professional and ethical standards for psychological services
- ☐ D. only work with fellow psychologists when developing professional and ethical standards for psychological services

The correct answer is B.

Psychologists frequently consult with other professionals, such as medical doctors, lawyers, and teachers. It is imperative that they be aware that every profession has professional and ethical standards that must be maintained. General Principle B of APA's Ethics Code states that "psychologists consult with, refer to, or cooperate with other professionals and institutions to the extent needed to serve the best interests of those with whom they work"; and the Values Statement of Principle IV of the Canadian Code of Ethics states that "in order to be responsible and accountable to society, and to contribute constructively to its ongoing development, psychologists need to be willing to work in partnership with others." This answer is most consistent with these guidelines.

Answer A: It is unrealistic to presume that it is possible to limit decision-making to psychologists only. There are many situations, especially in a multidisciplinary setting, where consultation with other professionals is necessary.

Answer C: Psychologists do not need to obtain permission to work with other professionals.

Answer D: Each profession has different professional and ethical responsibilities, and it is not advisable (and often not possible) to homogenize the responsibilities of different professions.

Question ID #12128: Dr. Ja-Hoon Jang is conducting a research study that involves interviewing junior high school students about peer relationships. Before beginning the study, Dr. Jang obtained informed consent from the parents of the students as well as assent from the students. During the course of the study, one of the students says he doesn't want to complete the interview. Dr. Jang should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. tell the student that he cannot withdraw from the study since his parents signed a consent
- ☐ B. tell the student that he cannot withdraw from the study since he agreed to participate
- ☐ C. contact the student's parents to ask them to encourage their son to complete the interview
- ☐ D. allow the student to withdraw from the study

The correct answer is D.

This issue is addressed by Standard 8.02 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle I.24 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. Ethical guidelines require researchers to allow participants to withdraw at any time from a research study. This answer is most consistent with this requirement.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. The student should be allowed to withdraw.

Answer B: Research participants should always be allowed to withdraw from a study, regardless of whether they gave their assent or consent at the beginning.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect. The psychologist should allow the student to withdraw.

Question ID #12131: Dr. Leonard, a licensed psychologist, has been seeing a prison inmate in group therapy for several months and is asked by the parole board to evaluate the inmate to assist with their decision. As an ethical psychologist, Dr. Leonard should:

Select one:

- ☐ A. agree to evaluate the inmate
- ☐ B. agree to evaluate the inmate only if the inmate believes it is in their best interest
- ☐ C. agree to do so only if she is allowed to explain the purpose of the evaluation and the limits on confidentiality to the inmate
- ☐ D. refuse to evaluate the inmate for the purpose of parole

The correct answer is A.

Although the APA guidelines state that multiple relationships should be avoided if there is risk of exploitation or impaired objectivity, an exception is allowed for therapists in a forensic setting to also conduct parole evaluations. Thus, it would be okay for Dr. Leonard to complete the parole evaluation.

Answers B, C, and D: These statements are incorrect because they describe actions that are inaccurate.

Question ID #12132: Which of the following best describes ethical guidelines regarding the use of inducements to encourage individuals to participate in a research study?

Select one:

- ☐ A. Financial and other inducements are acceptable only when they do not coerce participation in the research study.
- ☐ B. Financial and other inducements are acceptable only when the risks for participating in the study are clearly described to potential participants.
- ☐ C. Financial and other inducements are acceptable only when alternative methods for obtaining participants are unavailable.
- ☐ D. Financial inducements are unacceptable under any circumstances.

The correct answer is A.

The use of inducements to encourage participation in a research study is addressed by Standard 8.06 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principles I.27 and III.32 of the Canadian Code of Ethics. This answer is most consistent with ethical guidelines. For example, Standard 8.06 of the Ethics Code states that "psychologists make reasonable efforts to avoid offering excessive or inappropriate financial or other inducements for research participation when such inducements are likely to coerce participation."

Answer B is incorrect. This answer does not accurately describe ethical guidelines regarding the use of inducements.

Answer C is incorrect. This answer does not accurately describe ethical guidelines regarding the use of inducements.

Answer D is incorrect because financial and other inducements are acceptable in some circumstances.

Question ID #12133: Dr. Brian Bertram, a licensed psychologist, is hired by the owner of a company to evaluate employees who are underperforming. The determination would assist in identifying additional training needs or counseling for employees. In this situation, Dr. Bertram should _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. reveal the information obtained from each employee to the owner of the company
- ☐ B. reveal information about each employee only after obtaining a signed consent from employees
- ☐ C. not discuss confidentiality with the employees since to do so might limit their willingness to reveal information
- ☐ D. inform each employee prior to the evaluation of the potential limits on confidentiality

The correct answer is D.

Standard 3.07 of the APA's Ethics Code states that "when psychologists agree to provide services to a person or entity at the request of a third party, psychologists attempt to clarify at the outset of the service the nature of the relationship with all individuals or organizations involved. This clarification includes ... the fact that there may be limits to confidentiality." Principle 1.26 of the Canadian Code of Ethics contains similar language. In the situation described in this question, the company does have a right to relevant information, but this does not free the psychologist from the obligation to inform employees about the limits of confidentiality and the company about what kinds of employee information will be revealed.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect because it fails to abide by ethical codes which emphasize informing individuals regarding the limits of confidentiality.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect. The organization is the client, but the psychologist has a responsibility to inform employees regarding the nature of the relationships involved.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect and not aligned with ethical obligations.

Question ID #12134: If a psychologist acts as both a fact witness for a plaintiff and an expert witness for the court in a criminal trial, she has acted _____.

- ☐ A. unethically by accepting dual roles
- ☐ B. ethically as long as she did not have a prior relationship with the plaintiff
- ☐ C. ethically as long as she clarifies her roles with all parties
- ☐ D. ethically as long as she obtains a waiver from the court

The correct answer is C.

The adoption of multiple roles is addressed in the ethics codes published by the American and Canadian Psychological Associations and in the APA's "Specialty Guidelines for Forensic Psychology." According to ethical guidelines, maintaining multiple roles may be acceptable as long as the psychologist considers the risks and benefits of doing so for all involved parties and clarifies the nature of the multiples roles with all involved parties. See Standard 3.05 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle I.26 of the Canadian Code of Ethics and Paragraph 4.02 of the "Specialty Guidelines for Forensic Psychology."

Answer A: This answer is incorrect. As long as the psychologist meets the criteria described above, she has behaved ethically.

- ☐ A. HIPAA takes precedence over state laws.
- ☐ B. HIPAA is superseded by state laws when those laws provide greater privacy protection.
- ☐ C. HIPAA is enforceable only in the absence of state and other relevant federal laws.
- ☐ D. HIPAA applies only to organizations that receive financial assistance from the federal government.

HIPAA's privacy rule provides standards for protecting the privacy and security of health information that is transmitted electronically. The privacy rule provides minimum standards for access to and use of patient information and is superseded by other laws that provide patients with greater control over their health records.

Answer A is incorrect. If state laws provide a higher level of privacy protection, those laws take precedence.

Answers C and D are incorrect as neither answer applies to HIPAA.

Question ID #12136: Dr. Melba Morrison, a licensed psychologist, conducts research and teaches several classes at a large university. In her social psychology class, she usually covers only material that is consistent with the results of her research. In terms of the ethical guidelines, this practice is _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. ethical since it is up to Dr. Morrison to decide what to cover in her class
- ☐ B. ethical as long as Dr. Morrison provides information about her policy in the class syllabus
- ☐ C. questionable, but not addressed by ethical guidelines
- ☐ D. unethical

The correct answer is D.

Standard 7.03 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle III.12 of the Canadian Code of Ethics addresses this issue. To be consistent with ethical requirements, when acting as an instructor or trainer, psychologists must present information accurately and in an unbiased way. Therefore, Dr. Morrison is acting unethically by presenting only information that is consistent with the results of her own research.

Answer A: This answer is incorrect given ethics codes require psychologists to deliver academic material in an unbiased way.

Answer B: This answer is incorrect as it misses the larger point that academic material needs to be presented in an accurate and unbiased way.

Answer C: This answer is incorrect given the behavior is inconsistent with ethical guidelines.

- ☐ C. call the other psychologist to inform him of the situation and obtain his permission to continue therapy with the client
- ☐ D. discuss the treatment issues with the client during the next session

The correct answer is D.

Standard 10.04 of the APA's Ethics Code and Principle II.18 of the Canadian Code of Ethics addresses this issue. In this situation, Dr. Bramwell would want to consider the client's welfare and avoid duplicating services or working at cross purposes with the other psychologist. Consequently, of the answers given, this is the best one.

Select one:

- ☐ A. cost-feasibility analysis
- ☐ B. cost-minimization analysis
- ☐ C. cost-utility analysis
- ☐ D. cost-benefit analysis

The correct answer is C.

Cost analysis is conducted to determine the optimal allocation of financial resources. Experts distinguish between the four methods of cost analysis listed in the answers to this question. Additional information on these methods is provided in the Ethics and Professional Issues chapter of the written study materials.

Answer A: Cost-feasibility analysis is used to determine the feasibility of an intervention based on the monetary and other resources it requires.

Answer B: As its name implies, cost-minimization analysis is conducted to identify the least costly option among several options that produce equivalent outcomes.

Question ID #12142: A psychologist's behavior as a private citizen _____.

Select one:

- ☐ A. can never serve as grounds for a charge of unethical conduct
- ☐ B. may serve as grounds for a charge of unethical conduct if it violates the ethics code
- ☐ C. may serve as grounds for a charge of unethical conduct if it compromises his/her professional responsibilities
- ☐ D. will serve as grounds for a charge of unethical conduct when it violates the law

The correct answer is C.

The introduction of the APA Ethics Code and the Preamble of the Canadian Code of Ethics address a psychologist's private behaviors. The Introduction to the APA's Ethics Code states that the "This Ethics Code applies only to psychologists' activities that are part of their scientific, educational, or professional roles as psychologists..... These activities shall be distinguished from the purely private conduct of psychologists, which is not within the purview of the Ethics Code." Similar language is included in the Preamble of the Canadian Code of Ethics.

Answer A: A psychologist's private behavior that compromises their professional responsibilities or negatively impacts the public's trust in the field may be grounds for an ethics violation.

Answer B: This answer initially may appear to be a reasonable choice, but it is incorrect because personal behavior is not governed by professional ethics codes.

Answer D: Minor legal infractions such as traffic violations are not likely to be grounds for a charge of unethical conduct.
